There are public school and private schools. There are also junior colleges (2~3years) (5years), as well as various categories of technical schools.

Elementary and Jr. high School make up compulsory education. Japanese citizens are required to put their child in a school, but foreign residents do not have the same requirement. You must be a resident of Japan, and have a school age child.

【Elementary · Jr. High School】

Children of non-Japanese residents do not need to enter school, however we recommend putting your child in school for his future and education.

【School in Your Residential Area】

Same as Japanese students, non-Japanese residents students basically have to enter a school located in their residential area. If the child's Japanese is not good enough, an instructor will be sent to provide language assistance. However, this instructor might not be able to be dispatched for very long.

【Cost】

Tuition and textbook fees are free, but school lunch and school supplies will come at cost. If putting your child in school will cause you economic difficulties, you can apply for support from the city. To do this, you will need to correspond to some standards set by the city.
